The Dwight D. Eisenhower School for National Security & Resource Strategy

Private Sector Fellows Program

The Eisenhower School

The Dwight D. Eisenhower School for National Security and Resource Strategy is one of five colleges within the National Defense University. A Department of Defense (DoD) Senior Service College, the Eisenhower School combines a fully accredited Joint Professional Military Education (JPME II) and a graduate level degree to deliver the premier senior executive leadership education for the development of strategic leaders and the integration National Security Strategy and resources.

Mission

The Eisenhower School Prepares select military officers and civilians for strategic leadership and success in developing national strategy and in evaluation, marshalling, and managing resources in the execution of the strategy.

The Private Sector Fellows Program

The Private Sector Fellows Program is a unique DoD program which allows for a select number of private sector civilians, working in organizations relevant to national security to receive an education at the Eisenhower School. The school's mission is to create strategic leaders with a detailed understanding of the defense industrial base and its impact on national security. Our goal is to promote public-private sector interaction and understanding, in order to develop the relationships needed to guarantee the collective defense of our nation.

The Industry Studies Program provides an experiential learning opportunity by allowing students to interact with senior leaders in both government and private industry.
